English Financiers Epress Views on the Election of McKinley.

RESTORES CONFIDENCE IN UNITED STATES

Assurance of Stable Government and Deathblow to Silver Crase and Wildest Financiering is Most Welcome News.

(Copyright, 1900, by Press Publishing Co.) LUMBUR NOV. 7 .- (New York World Cablegram-Special Telegram.) - Excitement in London over the presidential election was unparatieled. American rails rattled up several points before the nominal business lours of the Stock Exchange on the expectation of seavy buying from your side. Bryan's defeat is accepted by the dominant political party here as strengthening of America as a world power. The anti-silverites Degard it as a deathblow for free silver in the United States, where that movement has its only important hold. Bryan's victory would have been regarded here, too, as equivalent to Croker's, so on every ground England rejoiced.

McKinley's election created a commotion here only second to that caused by Saltabury's recent victory at the polls. It was the dominant topic in the newspapers, as well as in the street cars, the counting houses and at the clubs. Feeling against Bryan here was mainly on economic grounds, be having been represented as a preacher of financial anarchy, and the financial circles in the city of London experienced the keenest relief when McKinley's victory was assared. I have elicited the opinions of England's leading representatives of high finance and found everywhere intense satisfaction prevailing. The governor of the Bank of England. Samuel Stewart Gladstone, received me in. the bank parlor and, in reply to my request for his view of the effect on the money and stock markets of McKinley's re-election, "The Bank of England never gives opinions, but my personal view you are welcome to. McKinley's election must have a healthy effect, both financially and politically. I consider it in the first place as a great security for the peace of the world. Here the undoubted belief has been that if Bryan were elected it might mean disturbance and unsettlement in the finacial world, though probably had he attained power he would have beeen more cautious than was anticipated. He had already, I see, modifled his sliver policy, but the mere chance of his being chosen, although all portents were in favor of McKinley, did have a restrictive influence on business, and now we may look to a revival of business and the strepgthening of American securities. That is my opinion for what it is worth."

"How do you consider Bryan's second defeat will affact the bimetallic movement?" 'I think it had already ceased to count, and this defeat should kill it. I am convinced, on the whole, that the election has turned out for the best.'

Increases Investors' Confidence.

Hon. Francis Baring, the working chief of the firm of Baring Bres., in reply to similar questions, said: "The good effect of McKinley's election has been already reprices have hardened greatly. I believe it will increase confidence, and business will be essailly improve. It had been arrested to some extent by uncertainty. Now it has begun to go ahead again and English capital will be more freeely invested in American securities and undertakings. As to its bearing on bimetallism, that is too big a question to go into today. Sufficient for the day is the evil thereof."

At I. S. Moigan's London office the World found Mr. Pierpont Morgan much more decided in his opinion on the result. He said: flected in the American market, where

At I. S. Morgan's London office the World found Mr. Pierpont Morgan much more decided in his opinion on the result. He said:

"I consider it will be a relief to business interests, both here and in America, that the election is over. True, nobody here who knew anything of the situation in the United States feared Bryan's election, and the result has been to some extent discounted so far as securities are concerned, but the general effect on commerce and finance must be excellent. For the last fortnight prices have showed an upward tendency, and today the general relief is expressed by further immediate improvement. As to the silver movement, that is already dead over here, though if it had any lingering remains of though if it had any lingering remains of life in it doubtless Bryan's election would have revived it. Now it has got its finishing stroke. The buying of American securities here is mainly for Americans, there being a steady stream of buying for some to e past, but now that McKinley is elected English money will also be forthcoming for American stocks."

Expected Srtingency Averted.

Sir Samuel Montagu, head of the well known banking and bullionist firm and one of the shrewdest financiers in England, said; "In consuftation with my partners, we agreed in view of Bryan's election Amerimps would immediately begin to hoard gold, apprehending some kind of silver legislation. That would have drawn on our gold reserves, musing a stringency in the money market. This fear has been removed by McKinley's election and now the drain of gold will stop. Therefore the effect on the money market will be good. It will also improve commerce and enhance sound American securities for, investors and manufacturers, who were uncertain whether they would be paid in gold or silver."

I then went to the offices of the Bimetallic Icague, which in 1896 was a powerful and active silverite organization, but found them pliffed by each party making a show-down untenanted.

GERMANY FULL OF GLADNESS Re-Election of President deKinley Regarded as Token of Continued Cordiality.

RERLIN. Nov. 7 .- German official goverment circles are all delighted at McKinley's election. The American embassy today received a number of congratulations. Generally speaking the German public is taking much greater inte est in the American election than heretofore. Dr. von Holleben, German ambassador to the United States, who is now in this city, said to the correspondent of the associated Press about the result: "We all rejoice over it." Dr. Barth, the Fre stanige leader, said: "I regard Mr. M Kinley's elect on, all things considered, as the best result, although I cannot endorse his imperialistic tendencies. Yet I regard his election as more

> The Germans greet McKinley's election above all as a victory for sound currency over revolutionary monetary experiments, which would have been calculated to shake most severely the basis of the entire world's commerce. Anyhow, Germany's policy is to nurse close and loyal relations with the head of a country that is connected with us by so many economic and national ites as is the United States.
> For that reason, too, the emperor has repeatedly made approaches to President McKinley and the latter has, especially recently responded cordially. There are in no part of the world serious differences between the United States and Germany. In China both powers have marched on the same lines after McKinley's first feeling of distrust regarding Germany's alleged territorial schemes subsided. We hope that during his forthcoming administration all political questions will be solved between the two countries in the same spirit of fairness and mutual confidence. Above all, we hope that the question of a commercial treaty will be solved.

The Vossische Zeitung says: The Vossische Zeitung says:

Germany can only rejoice at the further strengthening and solidification of the economic conditions in the United States. No state can escape the vice of having competitors in the world's markets. That must be reckoned and we must put forth all our strength in peaceful competition. But, not only for North American industrial interests is Mr. McKinley's re-election of great importance, but also for the entire commerce of the world, which is virally interested in a gold standard in the United States. For these and a number of other reasons the result of the election may be considered as the less of evils.

The Post says:

The Post says:

The result is greeted with satisfaction and sympathy in Germany, for the reelected president has won the considence of our government and our diplomats during his term by constant efforts to maintain good relations between Germany and the United States. In the midst of popular passion, the president preserved a cool head and turned aside rude hands which tried to force him into an anti-German policy. Mr. Mckinley's victory means a continuance of the present pleasant relations between Germany and the United States and we hope that the tariff negotiations between the two countries will also have at least as good a mutual result.

Retrospection Pleases. The Post says:

Retrospection Pleases. The Neuste Nachtrichten says: "From a German standpoint Mr. McKihley's re-election gives no occasion for regret. Of course there have been differences between the two states during the last few years. But when we look today back upon their settlement, the conclusion arrived at is that Mr. Mc-Kipley did not stand in the way of a settlement. The controversy over the American life insurance companies was amicably settled last summer and Germany's grievances in tariff matters were satisfactorily disposed of. The Washington government during the Spanish- American war observed a most thoroughly correct attitude, in pleasant contrast with the public agitation which threatened a far-reaching esstrangement. The United States' position the two western clubs, Denver and Pueblo, in the Samoa question was pronouncedly favorable to Germany and aided a solution favorable to Germany."

The National Zeitung says: "Mr. Mc-Kinley's victory can only be received by standpoint of excellent personal relations between the president and the emperor, which have repeatedly found expression from both sides and which have also been shown by the friendly settlement of some of the important questions discussed be tween them during the past few years.

the less of evils. We may hope that the United States, after leaving of its own accord the isolation, which was self-impored, and coming into constant and permanent contact with the European powers, will become convinced that the system of studied disregard which it has bitherto pursued can no longer be maintained."

The Boersen Courier says: "We have learned to count with Mr. McKinley and his policy and as regards the relations between Germany and the United States, they have become during the last year very good and even cordial, after the series of misunderstandings which had arisen over there had been dispelled by the frank and loyal methods of German diplomacy. There are no differences between Berlin and Washington anent foreign questions and regarding economic differences they will doubtless be satisfactorily adjusted by mutual concessions."

Thinks American Politics Mercenary. The Deutsche Tags Zeitung, which is the main agrarian organ, says: "We have from. the first expressed the opinion that the leared the possibility of Bryan's election, party which would win was the party which had the most dollars and that this party was the republican party and gold bugs was an undoubted fact. The whole' of the number of dollars meant to be expended upon the election. This would also show the number of electors. But then the Americans like an election campaign, as it is exciting sport. For politics at the large the election result at this time is of no consequence.'

The Taegliche Rundschau says: "Usdoubtedly for America an era of world fail and I realized something must be power politics of the most intense description begins and, judging from the samples thereof already seen, this will not be a factor for promoting the world's peace. The United States will not show its true face in the Chinese question. We cannot say that our confidence in Mr. McKinley's good will toward Germany is very strong."

Kansas City Magnate Seeks Admission to the Western League.

OWNERS IN CONFERENCE ON THE MATTER

Meeting Held at Omaha to Discuss the Proposed Increase of the Circuit, but No Conclusion is Reached.

An informal meeting of the Western League of Base Ball clubs was held in this city yesterday. The session was a brief one and consisted merely, President Hickey stated, of a discussion of affairs for next year in order that various propositions may be considered by the several managers between this time and the holding of the annal meeting of the league in Denver, November 21.

The meeting was attended by President T. J. Hickey and Manager J. F. Runcie of St. Joseph; George Tebeau, owner of the Denver franchise; Manager A. B. Beall of Sloux City and President Kelth and Manager Rourke of the Omaha club. These magnates were closeted during the morning with Manager Manning and Judge Cas-koden, representing the Kansas City club of the American league.

It is understood that the principal topic of discussion with the magnates was the formation of the circuit for next season. The assurance that Kansas City and Minneapolls will have their franchises in the American league transferred to some eastern cities leaves the Western league the only available organization with which those two cities may identify themselves. Nothing definite in the matter of their entering the Western was decided at yesterday's meeting, but the ground was gone pretty thoroughly over so that the magnates may have ample opportunity to pender the situation before final action in the matter is taken at the annual meeting in Denver.

"There is no question," said one of the magnates "that the Western can extend its territory to include Kansas City, Minperpolis and St. Paul provided the members of the league decide that such move will be advisable. The whole thing, however, is still 'up in the air.' It is a problem of some magnitude. Our six-club league last season was a great success and whether or not it would be a greater one by the addition of these cities to the circuit and enlargement from a six to an eight-club league is a question. The territory would be an extensive one and the long stretch between Denver and Minneapolis is not to be considered lightly. In case the league is enlarged it is my idea that Des Moines will be dropped out and retained. This would make a circuit consisting of Minneapolis, St. Paul, Sioux City, Omaha, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Denver

Mr. Houlding spent four years in the celestial empire and is well acquainted with the people and the conditions. In spraking of the matter last night he attributed the Boxer uprising to the changing industrial conditions more than to any other one cause. The bands of brigands were augmented by persons who objected to the action of the foreigners in seizing the land."
